LUTHERANS GO INTO COURT

Temporal Tribunal Called Upon to Adjust a Matter of Conscience. Troubles in Tekamah Church Circles.

There are two warring factions in the Lutheran church in Tekamah, Burdett county, and they have gone to the courts to decide as to which side shall have the possession of the church edifice. The history of the trouble extends over a long period and both factions declare their intention to fight it out to the end.

As long ago as 1870 Simon Kerf, the father of Kerf's grammar, residing in the east, deeded to the Lutheran church of Burdett and Dodge counties, forty acres of land near the town of Tekamah, with the understanding that the church should never be dissolved and that the property should always be used for the benefit of the church.

At this time the heirs of Kerf lived in the east and concluded to take a hand by recovering the land, providing that there was a succession from the original church. The church people learned of this, but they kept their own secrets and went right along with the fight. The nine trustees drew out and set up in business, attaching themselves to the Missouri synod, which taught that the children should not be allowed to attend the public schools and that the members should not hold office in any secular society.

The action of the two factions tore a wide breach in the good intentions of the Lutheran people of Burdett. From that time there was a fight over the possession of the church building, both sides claiming the right to enter and hold the usual Sunday services. The members of the Tekamah congregation were divided and succeeded in capturing the house of worship, but they were not in full possession of the church building by Kerf's heirs. Kerf knew a thing or two. By a flank movement they got into the church, held a meeting and it is claimed, walked away with the church building, including the minutes of all the meetings held when the united congregation was in peace with the entire world.

The court calendar for today is as follows: 8:15—Law room. 8:30—Judge Davis. 8:45—Burdett (administrator vs Home Insur.
